

About the Artist:

I worked in fine art galleries and custom frame shops early in my career while continuing to develop as a fine artist.

After raising a family, in January 2000, I opened Artisan Framing & Gallery in Hebron, Connecticut, which allowed me to devote time for my own painting and body prints.

My work has best been described as intuitive with a strong sense of color, movement and gesture. I work in mixed media, incorporating pastels, metallic paints, acrylics and graphite, layering to achieve the desired effect.

In August of 2009, Artisan Framing & Gallery was relocated to Marlborough, Connecticut. The gallery represents local, regional, and nationally-recognized artists.

My work is in numerous private collections and my unique body prints have developed a national following.

The original idea of creating monoprints from the actual female figure was conceived as a final project for a college erotic art class.

The final portrait is a luminous & unique celebration of the female form.

No two custom prints are ever alike, reflecting each client's own sensuous shape and personality.

Having painted over 1000 commissions, I am pleased to represent an national clientele.

With each new commission, I am as thrilled and excited as the client upon presentation of the finished body print.
